Chairman's Message
Did you know that there were over 400 charities formed in the ashes of 9/11? Did you know that today there are only a handful left standing? Indeed, Tuesday's Children is still the only charity prioritizing the needs of 9/11 children.
We made a simple and solemn Promise to those who carry the weight of the devastation of that day: We Promised to be there to support them into adulthood. This is "The Promise."
As time passes, donors tire, the economy has entered a recession and some simply want to turn the page. Yet, the Board and the Staff of Tuesday's Children keep on serving because they know that 9/11 kids don't have the choice to turn the page. They carry it with them. It is a part of who they are.
Clearly, there is so much more work to be done. The youngest 9/11 Kids are only seven and eight years old.
Through Project Common Bond, our teenagers are giving back to others around the world who have suffered from acts of terrorism.
Please join me, with your help we can keep The Promise.
David Weild IV
Chairman of the Board
Tuesday's Children
Tuesday's Children is a non-profit family service organization that has made a long-term commitment to every individual who was directly impacted by the events of September 11, 2001 and those whose lives have been changed forever by the effects of terrorism around the globe.
Our programs are created with one simple goal - to develop the resources and support necessary to not only recover, but to reach one's full potential. Programs include Project Common Bond that has become an international success.
We are providing a wide range of programming including mentoring, educational and career guidance, leadership training and life management programs, all designed to address the unmet needs of children and family members, rescue workers and their families at each and every stage of life and recovery.

Tuesday's Children launches new website today after a 3 month period of design and development.

"We wanted a fresh and elegant look that would appeal to our visitors," said Executive Director, Terry Sears. "This new design reflects the core structure of our organization and groups information accordingly. Users should find the information they need quickly and easily."

The new website features information about Tuesday's Children programs and services. One new feature is a resource library that includes photos, video clips, news items, and a series of great articles that will grow over time.

Additional benefits are offered to visitors who subscribe to the website, including access to all newsletters and the Tuesday's Children event photo gallery, which is updated shortly after events. Subscription is free (no credit cards required) and all information is strictly confidential.

The website was generously created and donated by Phillip

Brown, a friend of Tuesday's Children Board Member Irene Dickey.

"We've taken a fresh look at the organization and designed a site that is clean, functional and informative. The site is easy to navigate and we've used a number of different ways to display information to keep it fresh and interesting," said Brown. "The Tuesday's Children staff, along with board members, were great to work with. It really was a collaborative effort and I hope it serves the organization and the public well for many years to come."

The Tuesday's Children website is a resource for 9/11 children and families, first responders and their families and the general public. The new website can be found at www.tuesdayschildren.org .
